ARROYO gives up House seat for his sons, sets a Galing Pinoy's first nominees.

PINEDA, son of GMA ally Lito Pineda, is the second nominee of Galing Pinoy.

VELARDE, G Shadda leader and GMA's spiritual adviser, is Bulay's BR nominee.

By Kristine L. Alano and Leda B. Salaverria

THE ELDER SON OF PRESIDENT Macapagal-Arroyo has teamed up with the son of suspected "jueteng" lord Bong Pineda to join seats in the House of Representatives as nominees of a party-list group that claims to represent security guards.

Outgoing Pampanga Rep. Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo is the first nominee of Galing Pinoy, while Dennis Pineda, the outgoing mayor of Lufian, Pangasinan, is the group's second nominee.

Each party-list group is entitled to a minimum of three seats in the House of Representatives, but the groups are required to submit the names of at least five nominees by March 24.

But Mike Velarde, leader of the 15-Shadda Christian Movement, is the fifth nominee of Bulay. The first nominee is his son Marvin Michael, Joseph or Velarde son, Junior, is an incumbent Bulay representative, who is on his third and last term.

Widespread poll failure 'pure fantasy,' says Melo

By Joyce Gabriela Taparao Casap

INCORPORATE LOCAL PROBLEMS, maybe. Widespread breakdown, so says Commission on Elections (Comelec) Chair Jose Melo on Tuesday dismissed as "pure fantasy" fears of a failure of the country's first nationwide synchronized elections.

In a meeting here with officials of the military, police and the Comelec in Eastern Visayas, Melo admitted gloom could cover but that he did not expect there to happen on a large scale and affect the outcome of the May 10 balloting.

Heaps could result from members of the board of election inspectors (BEI) not showing up at their designated precinct for some reason, he said, or the occurrence of natural calamities in some areas.

"The talk on the failure of election is pure fantasy. It would happen in the localities but not nationwide," Melo said.

Comelec belatedly moves to purge party-lists

By Kristine L. Alano

REP. JUAN MIGUEL ARROYO REPRISING security guards? No kidding.

The party-list system said to be pulled to weed out the "undesirable" in the House of Representatives. The Commission on Elections (Comelec) is drafting a set of criteria for nominees and the procedures for disqualifying them, according to a Comelec official.

"We'll be issuing a resolution governing party-list nominees if not this week, then early next week," Comelec Commission President Benigno Aquino said yesterday.

"Nominees and the poll body now harmonizing suggestions such as those on the grounds for disqualification, threshold and filing fees.

Noting that the party-list system has been allowed for so long, party-list concerns must prove that they "belong" to a marginalized group, he added.

Otherwise, members of the public can file a complaint to disqualify the nominees. If a nominee fails the criteria set by the poll body, he or she will not be allowed to sit in the House. The seat will be given to the next party-list member who meets the requirements.

It is not enough that the nominees

Gov't urged to ban toxic Turkish flour

By Cynthia D. Bariana

THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD STOP such imports from using contaminated and potentially toxic flour from Turkey in producing the so-called poor man's bread, like pan de sal, manang, pan de coco and pan de leches.

The call was made by Sen. Aquilino Ponce who particularly dined it at the trade and health departments as well as the Bureau of Food and Drug (BFAD).

"We need the government to be 'glaring' Russian conflict with the health of our people by allowing the importation of Turkish flour."

Key food manufacturers in the Philippines are not using the imported flour, but small bakers are using the stuff purportedly available at 10 pesos a bag.

THE COUNTRY'S TOP CORPUS ARMY only so busy when his brother-in-arms only to help to support his initiative for presidential bid.

And fans of a military takeover in the event of a failed election, the Philippine Military Science Alumni Association yesterday called on its members to safeguard the integrity of the May 10 balloting.

In a two-page "Memorandum for All Commanders," the alumni group urged its members to live up to the "principles of our alma mater to which we have always revered."

"We urge you to take part in this election, be motivated, stand up and guard against any attempt to cheapen the free will of the Filipino people and the integrity of the elections," the memo reads.

Let us lead the righteous way for God, country and people," said the document signed by Sen. Rodolfo Bener, board

Disgusted with pols' mansions? Take pix, send to this group

By Philip C. Tabasa

DISGUSTED BY A PUBLIC OFFICIALS spending millions on bulgy SUV that you think is ill-gotten? Take a picture and send it to this group.

Anti-corruption activists yesterday launched the Philippine Public Transparency Reporting Police (PTRP) and its website, aiming to battle luxury the grassroots "to make transparency for change" to battle "corruption" graft and corruption. The PTRP website—www.ptrp.ph—was established "This Nation To (This is our Money)"—will feature pictures of alleged ill-gotten wealth. Plans are underway to make the Secretaries of Justice and Labor and the National Anti-Corruption Commission available online.

The first target of this "blame" drive? Politicians who put their names and pictures on signs assuming public projects. "We want to shame people, shame politicians," said Brian Alan Davis, the director of the project which is funded by the United States Agency for International Aid (USAID).

"We would like to see on and on politicians putting their own names and photos on publicly funded projects. I think it's totally wrong for people to put their names on the back of public money," Davis said.

"It's wrong. Maybe it's not corrupt, but it's basically using public money to advertise your own personal private gain, which is to get votes for the next election. And that is the definition of corruption," he said.

There said the group would write "all the politicians and all the presidential candidates" with the question, "Do you think this is morally acceptable or morally wrong?"

"And we will publish their reply," he said.

Davis also said the media should stop reporting that President Macapagal-Arroyo raised "her" projects somewhere in the country.

"They're not her projects. They belong to the people. The media will have to stop calling projects as 'her' projects. That's what we don't like—the personalization of public money," he said.

Penitents urged: Don't hurt selves

THERE ARE OTHER WAYS FOR CATHOLICS to express their faith other than subjecting their body or having themselves pulled to a cross. Catholic bishops reminded the faithful.

Most Holy Trinity Diocese and people should avoid having themselves and put up for other methods with which to show their devotion.

"I am advising those who have themselves and have themselves crucified to reflect their such activities. There are many ways to show that you respect for your life," Cardinal said in an interview with the Church on Radio Veritas.

Most Holy Trinity Diocese. The bishop said the Lenten season is supposed to center on reflection and repentance, according to a report posted on the website of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines.

The bishop added that people should not use crucifixions and the like to attract attention and make money.

"You cannot truly judge that if it's done in a way that is truly meaningful. The bishop said, 'I will tell it later in the day.'

Langit vs Bangit: Senate bet defends media vs AFP chief

POUNDER BRUNGAYER, AND NOW WITH SENATE, conditions for Langit have taken up the subject for media against the appointment of General Ponce (Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dennis Bangit) that would take him to the front line of the off and on duty among government officials.

Langit, who is a senatorial candidate, said that presidential should not be in the military, but of course's job is to protect the president during his job of protecting the president from the threat.

As a military officer, Bangit should live with the fact that everyone will always be there to see him with his own eyes.

"He should not be too military, what he did was a civilian appointment, an officer and a politician," said Langit.

Bangit walked out of his own press conference on Monday which he was asked about the reported media between him and Philippine National Police Inter-Commander General Ponce.

"I am not a politician, I am supposed to be a soldier with good manners and a gentleman that would deal with light on them. As a military officer, he should be there to know the basic rule that you don't shoot the messenger," he added.

Instead of being hit by an opponent, Langit said, that Bangit should be given more incentives for visiting efforts to get his job as he has been involved in the organization that he leads.

He added that this kind of situation must be immediately corrected, including that he is leading an organization that has been open with linked to security and surveillance.

"I think General Bangit needs to take a good course in how to handle the media. Media can be a valuable ally or an enemy. He needs to be able to handle the media. He may not always like the general, but he is not of his but he is a general. He should give credit," Langit added.

Noli lists RP moves in Rio urban forum

By Cynthia D. Balana

VICE PRESIDENT NOLI DE TACNA strategized and key development strategies adopted by the Philippines to help bridge urban development.

Addressing the (joint) session of the 5th World Urban Forum (WUF) in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, he third and last time to address the conference, as vice president and head of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (DHCD-OC), De Tacna said a National Urban Development and Housing Strategy (NUHS) had been put in place that positioned the government's template for urban upgrading activities and urban development.

Under the NUHS, the government provides a support that will improve economic growth, develop and strengthen local advantages and improve the quality of life of residents.

"This strategic approach to urban and housing development allowed us to focus our efforts on five basic thematic Urban competitiveness, poverty reduction, housing afford ability and delivery, sustainable communities, and performance-oriented governance," the vice president said in his speech.

He cited the Strategic Urban Change Project that he mentioned last year in Nanjing, China, which called attention to how informal settlers in coastal communities could influence climate change.

The output of this project, which was reached through urban city-programs, will ensure up growth, allow living and by local government officials are focus to covering and enhancing disaster risk infrastructure, local use and comprehensive development plans," De Tacna said.

Another initiative he said, was the creation of the Philippine Urban Consortium as a means to develop policies, viable institutional entities and develop the capability of urban stakeholders.

The same thing can be said for the case of gathering data in a system by thinking in terms of information flow. In this case, the system is the process of gathering data, and the information is the data being gathered.

Abstract. Mytilus species diversity was assessed along three sites spanning from the Atlantic Ocean to the Mediterranean Sea. The results showed that the highest number of species was found at the Atlantic site, followed by the central and then the Mediterranean site. This pattern may be related to the higher environmental variability and larger range of habitats found at the Atlantic site compared to the other two sites.

Reviving Cagayan's forgotten lighthouse

By Melvin Gascon
 Public Affairs, Cagayan

FOR ALMOST HALF A CENTURY, PARO DE CAPO Engaño or the Lighthouse of Cape Engaño, had been forgotten and neglected.

Through time, it just stood as a relic of a lighthouse on an island off the northeastern tip of Luzon, isolated, including the facilities of nature and public space.

In all, it changed in 2006 when the people of Santa Ana town in Cagayan awakened and were inspired by the recreation status of visitors who fascinated about how life was in the Spanish age lighthouse. They decided that it was time to restore its lost glory.

Two years later, their efforts bore fruit. Last 2009, the 118-year-old Paro de Cabo Engaño was formally declared an "important cultural property" by the National Museum.

That decision it is "trigged off from among the innumerable cultural properties as having exceptional cultural significance in the Philippines, but are not well, clearly outstanding to merit classification as a National Cultural Treasure," according to the National Museum declaration.

"The lighthouse and site lighthouse complex" was built in 1892 and it is still standing up to this date makes the engineering outstanding and is considered an "important" monument. It only the way intact, it would have been declared a national cultural heritage," said Angel Basista, head of the museum's cultural program division.

Research work

The declaration capped more than four years of a multidisciplinary research conducted by the National Museum in the geology, anthropology, historical and sociological worth of the lighthouse and its immediate vicinity.

One of the 27 Spanish lighthouses in the country, Paro de Cabo Engaño is recognized as "one of the earliest major Spanish colonial lighthouses that today still serves as digital evidence and tourism to visitors."

going records in the country?"

As the first light station upon entering the Subayan Channel and the last where leaving Philippine waters en route to the Pacific Ocean, "It plays a crucial role in navigation and maritime trade with China, Japan, Russia, Chile, Peru, the United States and Australia," the National Museum said.

Built from 1887 to 1892, the Paro de Cabo Engaño complex has four major structures that are still standing, though heavily deteriorated—a main pavilion, two smaller buildings (one a kitchen and the other a storeroom and powerhouse) and a tower.

The 11-meter (37-foot) octagonal tower at the center of the complex carries a cross-like structure that houses the now-general lantern.

"The assessment undertaken reveals that there is need to conserve the lighthouse as well as the rapid deterioration of its structures. Conservation efforts, however, should be in accordance with the internationally accepted standards," Basista said.

Thus, the declaration, though just the beginning, could at last be considered a milestone, Santa Ana officials said.

At an important cultural property, the lighthouse complex will now be among the government's priorities for looking at rehabilitation work. The National Museum will provide technical guidance on how to bring the lighthouse back to its original state, Basista said.

Once restored, the complex will become a centerpiece of tourism packages in Santa Ana, Cagayan, and Ilanillo City, tourism director in Cagayan Valley.

"We just have to be careful that Cape Engaño will not fall into the trap of too much commercialization. There is going to be promotion (of it as a tourist destination) but our priority is the preservation," he said.

Mayor Mariberto Villar Jr. expressed hope that efforts to revive the lighthouse would be sheltered from political bickering.

"The people of Santa Ana should unite and make political differences for Engaño. This is our pride, and we are not taking it for granted," he said.

OFFICIALS and residents of Santa Ana, Cagayan, are hopeful that with the declaration as an "important cultural property," the 118-year-old Paro de Cabo Engaño will see a revival in image as a landmark on an island paradise.

Finally, a founding date for Pangasinan

By Gabriel Cardenas
 Cagayan, Pangasinan

FOR THE FIRST TIME, AFTER MORE THAN 400 years, residents will finally be able to celebrate Pangasinan's founding anniversary.

The provincial board has decided Pangasinan's founding date as April 5, 1590.

"It doesn't a person who's happened today, it is us, Filipinos before I arrived after Jan 2007. I had always wanted to know the founding date of our province," said Gen. Marcelo S. Sison Jr., who signed the ordinance last month.

The board's decision was based on the recommendation of a research-based study committee that Engaño created last year. The committee, headed by former Vice Gov. Danilo Lopez, was composed of local historians, researchers and representatives from the academe.

"Our findings were a product of an extensive research," and Lopez, who said that the province's 400th anniversary celebration this year.

The committee found the significant facts which dated back to China's Ming Dynasty when Luan was referred to as "Lu-ang" and Pangasinan as "Pang-chia-ku."

Dr. Diego said that he did not completely believe Pangasinan's being a political and historic concerns with the Chinese were limited to work.

Another fact came from the writings of historian Benito Mendoza Gomez, where the word "Pangasinan" was among those registered in the 1590s.

Gomez cited Miguel de Luan's "Relacion de las Islas Filipinas" in 1591 and Bishop Domingo Salazar's writings, dated in his chronicle of 1598 that Pangasinan was among the areas with potential provinces of Luan, which had an absolute major threat of territory previously before 1595.

Another historical fact is that Pangasinan was created as a province during the American regime through Act No. 94 on Feb. 18, 1903, which, "to be extending the provisions of the provincial government act to the province of Pangasinan."

Second, however, showed that Pangasinan was organized and already related to a previous point to the historical rights.

"It is now clear to us that Pangasinan became a political unit in 1590 and the committee concluded that the founding year of Pangasinan," Diego said.

Since his group could not find the exact date when Pangasinan was declared an actual city, Diego said his committee decided to choose April 5 as founding day because it was on that day in 1573 that Pangasinan was established as an encomienda.

An encomienda is a labor system that was employed by the Spanish crown during the Spanish colonization. The Royal Crown granted a person a specified number of natives for whom they were to take responsibility. The owner of the grant (encomendero) was to instruct the natives in the Spanish language and to the Catholic faith. In return, they would send tribute from the natives.

Under the National Historical Institute guidelines, it is required to adopt the first of the payment of tribute being the capital of the province, Diego said.

"The 400th anniversary of the first of the Encomienda is celebrated traditionally by the Catholic Church every first day of January and therefore, has no fixed date. It is not adopted April 5," he said.

The ordinance said the declaration "shall not only mark such that more conclusive [proof of evidence to establish the exact date of Pangasinan] there are discovered."

Since 1990, Pangasinanians have been celebrating "Pangasinan Day" on Nov. 12.

The Republic Act No. 6271, which was signed into law by then President Corason Aquino, declared Nov. 15 a special non-working public holiday in Pangasinan to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the last Spanish Governor-General, a native of San Carlos City.

BIR seizes MMDA's bank assets

Disruption of agency's operations feared

By Rocco M. Domingo

THE BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE (BIR) has seized three bank accounts of the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) for its failure to remit at least P120 million in withholding taxes from 2000 to 2001.

When the government agency was also in danger of losing its other assets, including its heavy equipment and even the MMDA's main office in Quinsigao, Manila.

"The amount could be big," Revenue Commissioner Joel L. Tan-Tan said on Monday. "We are investigating the MMDA's payment records for the succeeding years."

He added that although the MMDA remitted withholding taxes, it did so with partial basis. For example, in 2006, the agency remitted only P200,000 to the BIR, Tan-Tan said.

"Based on the BIR's power provided for in the Tax Code, it is authorized to seize the MMDA's various bank accounts," he said.

This means that the banks concerned had already been notified that the MMDA should not be allowed to touch its funds because of a pending claim by the BIR.

According to Tan-Tan, the three bank accounts contain less than P120 million.

"That is why we are working to have the MMDA's withholding taxes and other equipment, even the MMDA building," Tan-Tan said. "The BIR Enforcement in Quinsigao City may have been in impending state."

Asked about the possible disruption in the MMDA's operations due to the seizure of its funds, Tan-Tan said, "We will lower their strength (income) but they can continue to do their work."

Handpicked to meet a bid, the MMDA is trying to minimize the total amount of operations it was expecting from the Department of Transportation and Communications, particularly the common carrier tax (CCT) related to the operations of the Light Rail Transit Line 2.

The CCT is expected to be three percent of the gross receipts every month and based on the BIR's estimate, the LRT Authority owes the government P600 million for the period covering 2005 to 2008.

Reached for comment, MMDA General Manager Robert Ho, chairman of the agency, had yet to respond to any of the BIR's seizure notices.

"The LRT is questioning that alleged tax deficiency (the Revenue Department) has written a letter to LRT asking for an explanation within 10 days up with their tax assessment," Ho stated.

He said they were wondering how the BIR came up with the figure of P120 million.

"We are asking for clarification from them (BIR) on our accounts and setting up our records accordingly to our daily operations," he said.

BSP to keep interest rates steady until June

Tetangco says domestic inflation outlook remains favorable

By Michelle N. Reyes

KEY POLICY RATES, WHICH HAVE BEEN AT HISTORIC lows since July 2009, will remain unchanged at least until June as the increase in consumer prices remain manageable as far as monetary authorities are concerned.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas has officially started reviewing its monetary policy stance since it started the mid-term rate and adjusted the requirements for extending discount loans to banks earlier this year, but the BSP said raising the key policy rate would leave it for the list of the "red" scenarios.

Monetary officials said that increasing the key policy rate has the most impact on the ability to decrease money. The BSP is thus trying to increase the key policy rate with overall monitoring of macroeconomic factors. "In the period to June, we [BSP] are in a position to manage it, so there's no indication of increasing it," he said.

Budget deficit widened to P33.2B in February

By Rosalind M. Domingo

INCREASING EXPENDITURE IN FEBRUARY over the budget by P33.2 billion, an increase of 14.5 percent from the P29.9 billion deficit a year ago despite improving yields from the biggest sources of revenues.

However, officials said, the increase in the budget deficit was mainly due to lower income from the Bureau of the Treasury.

Expenditures from the Department of Education showed that total government revenues in February reached P76.7 billion, up 3.3 percent from the P73.6 billion a year ago.

The BIR accounted for P31.5 billion, 7.5 percent higher than last year's P29.4 billion.

The Bureau of Customs collected P18.1 billion in February, 36.5 percent higher than the P13.2 billion last year.

Customs Commissioner Hilarion L. Maala said the pick-up in imports, mostly of petroleum products, was lifting the collection.

In particular, he said that the previously anticipated decline in the Philippine Shell Petroleum Corp.'s import of refined crude oil got a COO and helped them up revenue.

Customs and the oil firms are linked to a dispute over the collection of taxes. PT 2 billion in revenue from the oil firms, which is a significant amount, which is a significant amount, which is a significant amount.

On the other hand, government expenditures last month reached P109.9 billion, or at least the same as the P109.9 billion spent in the same month of 2009.

"Higher spending for public works and other lower income programs," he said, referring to spending related to programs of income tax cuts.

'Presidentiable' rides

Compiled by Chee E. Ibanes

DO CARLS REALLY reflect an individual's personality? Having said that, cars do seem to match their owners' lifestyles in a way that may be a classic model for social-media consumers to interpret. In fact, officials use the economic conditions, those would prefer a larger vehicle offering more seats and cargo space over such features project an image of responsibility.

But to say that a car can represent and such level of success is really accurate. However, not to be confused, it is an individual's personality that matters most and not the car.

However, choosing your car is a personal decision by taking our presidential candidates these questions: their family car, the first car they ever drove and their dream car if they can.

Their answers might influence the field and simple but can reveal an individual's personality. The first car they ever drove is the best indicator of their personality.

Manny Villar

YOU don't often encounter a highly capable car and SUV that is also the progeny of a nation and history in your car. As such, with the history of the Toyota Land Cruiser, we have attracted the car who would like to drive the car as a member of his family, or when visiting family and friends.

Dick Gordon

ALTHOUGH the media is often seen as biased, a Chevrolet Silverado 1500 is usually a car for the campaign trail. Dick Gordon is no exception. He will be seen go-to truck driving his new reliable Silverado.

He is known to drive at the early age of 12, taking his family's 1956 Ford Mustang V8 coupe as a gift.

But Gordon's choice of car will always be the 1994 Cadillac Series 60. Gordon's car is the only car that has been in the White House since 1994.

Jamby Madrigal

FOR the most part, the car is as well as the person. The car is the person's personality.

This is an interesting fact for the car. The car is the person's personality. The car is the person's personality.

PERLAS is known for his first vehicle, a 1981 Toyota Hilux pickup. He has always had his right of way driving the pickup-truck hybrid Toyota Prius.

Considering his preference for eco-friendly, friendly vehicles, he is not surprised that his dream car would be a hydrogen-powered car that opens up exciting new energy options.

PERLAS would definitely want to try his 2010 Toyota Prius 7 for a spin. It is the world's first production-ready hydrogen vehicle.

PREGNANT LINDA'S REVELATIONS

10 ways to buckle up your unborn passenger

By Tina S. Salzer

IT'S STILL A MALE-driven world, quite literally. In 2006, based on U.S. Department of Labor data, there were 3,306,514 deaths behind the wheel, while the figure for earlier years was 3,601,018.

The gaps may have the reasons. Particularly, however, driving safety doesn't depend on the majority being men, women with special concerns—such as pregnant women—require special attention when it comes to safety.

Stacy Jacobs, Traffic Safety Division chief of the NHTSA, told insurance companies that pregnant women, especially during the last trimester, should minimize their exposure to driving situations—whether they be drivers or passengers.

"We may be a careful driver but others may not be, so the more in a good-better driver if the car is being driven behind the wheel," Jacobs advised, "and a safe, solid car also plays a significant factor in keeping us safe."

For most car manufacturers who have really perfected the ways of protecting while and during the months of pregnancy, they still have significantly less about what happens to unborn babies in vehicle collisions.

Volvo, arguably the world leader when it comes to inventing safety technologies in motor vehicles, has kept in mind the special needs of pregnant women drivers and passengers. Since 2001, researchers at Volvo Car Group have been studying the special needs of pregnant women in terms of safety and in-car comfort.

Lars Thorsen, technical engineer at the Volvo Car Safety Center in Gothenburg, Sweden, has developed a unique computer model of a pregnant woman sitting in the car called "Linda." Through numerous simulated crash tests, Linda has provided a better understanding of the kinds of injuries pregnant women and their unborn babies can sustain in crashes.

She has also revealed the optimum positioning of the safety belt for pregnant women.

With the help of over 200 "test" female volunteers, Volvo has also carried out detailed computer studies of reaction times for pregnant women in its cars.

Now we're moving another step closer to our solution," said Thorsen.

It is a timely move for Volvo. The World Health Organization's World Health Center for Injury Research and Control said that car crashes are the leading cause of hospital stays and fatalities during pregnancy. For unborn children, vehicular accidents are the leading cause of injury mortality. The frequency of which exceeds other causes of death several fold.

In a separate case, head injuries have been most commonly observed in unborn babies involved in car accidents, both fatal and non-fatal. The most frequently documented cause of death in the unborn involved in car crashes, however, has been the partial or total detachment of the placenta from the wall of the uterus, resulting in the loss of supply of oxygen.

So, what when it is safe for pregnant women to drive?

Dr. Diane Simmons of the University of Colorado and the Department of the Air Force and the Air Force Medical Center said, "As long as you have a normal and uncomplicated pregnancy and no reason if you cannot drive, it is safe."

In fact, the steering wheel, that you can still drive, that it is always better to get the go signal from your personal doctor."

The mother-to-be and safety belts—perfect partners

Pregnant or not, what is perfectly plain from Volvo's research is that safety belts should be worn at all times when driving or riding in a vehicle. However, there is a proper way of buckling up, and this is especially critical for mothers-to-be.

Volvo's research shows that the correct way to buckle up is to sit in the driver's seat, with the seat belt across the chest and over the shoulder, and the lap belt across the hips, under the belly.

After all, it was Volvo engineer Håkan Thorsen who designed the three-point lap belt and introduced it to Volvo cars in 1959. It was named the "three-point" because it has three points of contact: the lap, the chest and the shoulder.

Volvo's research shows that the correct way to buckle up is to sit in the driver's seat, with the seat belt across the chest and over the shoulder, and the lap belt across the hips, under the belly.

1 On a three-point safety belt, always position the lap belt portion as low on the abdomen as possible. The shoulder belt should be routed over the shoulder.

2 Pull the lap belt over the thighs, lying flat under the belly. The lap belt should be flat against the top and sides of the thighs, and should not be allowed to slip up to the front of the "bump."

3 Make sure the torso belt is positioned between the breasts. Pull the belt tight. The diagonal belt should fit snugly against the shoulder, crossing down between the breasts and down the side of the torso. The belt needs to be in contact with the body as much as possible. And check, too, that it is not twisted anywhere.

4 Drive a vehicle that allows the most clearance between the steering wheel and abdomen.

5 Position the steering wheel to maintain abdomen-to-wheel clearance, while sitting a little toward the center of the seat.

6 Make sure to adjust the driver's seat and steering wheel properly to give you full control of the car. You need to be within comfortable reach of the steering wheel and pedals, yet allowing as much space as possible between the steering wheel and the upper half of your body.

7 Wear a safety belt regardless of where in the car you sit, and wear it properly.

10 Leave the air bag operational (if there's an option to turn it on or off).

9 When possible, ride as a passenger rather than drive to avoid potential contact with the steering wheel.

8 To fit the safety belt more as close to the body as possible, avoid wearing bulky clothes. Or adjust your seat to make sure they do not interfere with low placement of the lap belt.

Volvo's research shows that the correct way to buckle up is to sit in the driver's seat, with the seat belt across the chest and over the shoulder, and the lap belt across the hips, under the belly.

STYLING IN gardening is more than just a cluster of water-sprayed hazy-blossoms. It's more the garden's panel lined with P25,000 of hot, or the trellis of rare orchids, or the botanical trees worth six figures.

In an evergreen, tropical landscape, Daniel de la Cruz, who is gardening simply means gardening all the elements of the garden scene—ground covers, shrubs, vines, trees and flowers, and blending them into a unified whole and treating them with all the passion, so that in reality results in something new.

As an experienced sculptor, Daniel de la Cruz gardens in a different way. He is gardening in a way that is not just a matter of putting the right plant in the right spot, but also where the plant makes money. Just as, in a garden, he is not just a matter of putting the right plant in the right spot, but also where the plant makes money. Just as, in a garden, he is not just a matter of putting the right plant in the right spot, but also where the plant makes money.

His natural ability to design landscaping ideas leads to an experienced and creative personality and individual vision. His garden is a work of art with passion, but everything is done with the personal quality of design.

De la Cruz means the garden gardeners with his own

THE CONSUMER

Cynthia R. Buffalo

Be a vigilant and informed
consumer

MARCH IS THE WORLD CONSUMER RIGHTS DAY (WCRD). The observance of the event started in the mid 1970s and was intended to promote the basic rights of all consumers. It demands that these rights are respected and protected, and to protect market fairness and social justice.

There is World Consumer Rights Day (Nov. 15) in "Our Money, Our Rights." It aims to highlight consumer issues in relation to financial services. Access to the financial sector is key to the developing countries. As Consumers International (CI) points out, "There will soon be 1.7 billion people in the world with mobile phones but no bank account. 100% bank account coverage is Democratic Republic of the Congo, 59 percent in Azerbaijan. In developing countries financial services penetration is only 2 percent of the population and still no access in more than 10%."

The broad picture revealed by the work of CI members is that, in developing countries, the issue is basic income, while in rich countries commentators suffer from a lack of imagination, and a blindness of vision.

And art, it says: "Consumers in developing countries do not suffer from problems associated inextricably with the rich world, such as inflation, rampant interest-bearing credit costs." And says: "Simple the disparity is acute, consumption in the world has a range of problems in their dealings with financial service providers, from irresponsible lending practices to unfair treatment, abusive charges and abuse by oligopolistic behavior of oligopolies."

But is a why you, as a consumer, whether you are looking with disappointment at an advertisement or with a company employee, should be ignored and should we try to be answered, not questions, demand an explanation if there is something you do not understand, and be up-to-date on these conversations and answers.

The people you are dealing with know about the product and its merits; they are offering you, duh, duh. You won't embarrass yourself by asking questions that will help you understand what you are getting into. After all, it will cost you. Your question may spell the difference between getting a good bargain and being scolded and a measure of avoidance.

And after you have brought or paid for the service, if you have something to say to the teacher or provider—a complaint, a suggestion, another question...say it. Let themselves have you highlight their product or service.

The really good middlebrowers, however, do what writers ought to be doing but most do not: they pay. They purchase legitimate copyrights and creative services. They will thank you for them. When bettering us, find out how and they are doing this to best their (happy or disgruntled customer) by a margin on unhappy customers can send us a cold or a hot message in a mere handful of people in an instant. It's a little bit like a pay-don't-ask situation to what they should be saying about them.

Be a lighter person, that he's too God could believe could in this, and don't forget simply because people like it. And don't forget for the people who already are—like parents, service men and other workers. Because they believe in the world that the customer is always right, but they don't just mean saying their employees should be right, too.

Commentaries on political issues

The EcoVibes Coalition wants to lower risk among the premarket conditions "to best defend consumers against market abuse that can put their health, safety and welfare at risk." In a press release issued in December of 2008, the EcoVibes Coalition says premarket requests should tell the public what they will do about spin, spinners, double goods and services, stolen business practices and toxic products.

The Blackburn Report, among others, is a review of the implementation of Republic Act 294, the Consumer Protection Act.

DRAGON EGG HUNT
The egg-hunters have found a dragon egg. The dragon is a small, blue, scaly creature with a long, thin neck and a small, round body. It is sitting on a large, round egg. The dragon is looking at the egg with a curious expression. The egg is a light brown color with a mottled pattern. The dragon is standing on a patch of grass. The background is a simple, light blue sky.
